

March 2015

KAYOS PRODUCTIONS - Back in 1966, the band known as The Blues Magoos were lighting up the AM radio dials coast to coast. Big hits like "We Ain't Got Nothin' Yet" and "Tobacco Road" established the band with the teenybopper set and in 1969 FM radio went bonkers for "Never Goin' Back To Georgia". Albums on Mercury Records were well presented and further cemented the band's image among pop fans. Holy smokes but Blues Magoos are back after 40+ years with a new studio album called Psychedelic Resurrection. A sonic flashback to the mid to late 1960's, Psychedelic Resurrection still features founding Magoos' members Ralph Scala (vocals, keyboards) and Peppy Castro (vocals, guitar) and both are joined by a number of musicians, including cameos by original Magoos' guitarist Mike Esposito and original bassist Ronnie Gilbert. The best thing here is, Psychedelic Resurrection really sounds just like the original Blues Magoos. Original Blues Magoos fans will love this. There's even a new remake of "We Ain't Got Nothin' Yet" and other neo-psychedelic sounds to make it seem like it's 1966 all over again. Psychedelic Resurrection is a most welcome comeback from one of the early architects of mid

1960's American psychedelic music. With cover art to match the wild sounds within, Psychedelic Resurrection heralds the return of the legendary Blues Magoos. www.TheBluesMagoos.com